KWC BEVO E – Lightness in form and function

The KWC BEVO E is a premium stainless steel fitting with high standards of hygiene and safety - now available as a hybrid version.

The slim silhouette of the KWC BEVO E captivates. The transitions are strikingly elegant. As a design element, the asymmetrical spout catches the eye and brings exclusivity to the kitchen. There are practical reasons for using stainless steel, as it guarantees comprehensive hygiene, durability and a long service life. The double-shell design of the spray models ensures a high level of safety. No matter how hot the water flowing through the tap, the outer shell of the KWC BEVO E remains cool – reliable protection against scalding.

Quiet purity

The laminar flow of the KWC BEVO E is remarkably quiet because it flows without disturbing the surrounding air. This improves hygiene, as virtually no bacteria are absorbed from the surrounding air, and reduces the noise to a comfortable level.

Functional jet

The soft spray operating mode is suitable for gently washing fruit and vegetables. With the strong and quiet laminar stream, pots can be filled quickly and washing up is practically spray-free.

Sustainable design

The elegant KWC BEVO E interprets classic KWC design elements. Wherever it is used, it is an eye-catcher, both in the industrial black and brushed stainless steel versions. The stainless steel of the tap can be almost completely recycled and is already partially recycled – a sign of its sustainability.

Contactless hygiene

A simple wave activates the cold water flow – completely contact-free and without leaving drops on the tap. It stops again just as automatically. Another wave and the water flows again. The sensor control of the hybrid version enables even greater hygiene in the kitchen.

Manual familiarity

Conventional control with mixed water for cold, warm and hot works as usual with a lever – practical for everyday use of the tap when washing up, filling pots and other kitchen tasks.
